

Brussels, 16 September 2013

11th EGGVP General Managers Meeting in Bologna

On 13 September 2013, EGGVP held its annual EGGVP General Managers Meeting in Bologna (Italy). EGGVP members discussed strategies to deal with emerging challenges related to generic veterinary medicines in Europe, as the new regulatory framework in preparation or the control of antimicrobial resistance in the veterinary sector.

Being this a crucial and major topic of concern, EGGVP invited Dr. Luca Guardabassi, Professor in Antimicrobial Resistance at University of Copenhagen, who gave a very valuable talk on the views for the control of antibiotic resistance in the veterinary sector from a scientist standpoint.

A social event took place the day before, in which participants had the opportunity to learn more about Formula 1 world by exploring Enzo Ferrari's museum and birth home. Afterwards, EGGVP members visited a traditional acetaia (DOP Aceto Balsamico di Modena), followed by a networking dinner.

Rob Joosten, Chairman of EGGVP, thanked the member companies for their participation and also for their valuable contributions to the goals achieved this year. With the continued support from its 22 members, EGGVP has been able to increase its visibility in the EU and is continuously affirming its position as a key stakeholder on the animal health and the food chain fields.

For more information please contact the EGGVP at info@eggvp.org or visit our website at www.eggvp.org